

Ramza Jaber has dedicated over three decades to the fields of education, culture, science, information, and communication. Currently, she serves as an advisor and Chief of Cabinet to the Minister of Education and Higher Education. Her academic background includes a bachelor's degree in information and communication sciences from the Lebanese University, with ongoing studies towards a master's degree in education sciences at Saint Joseph University of Beirut.

During her tenure as Deputy Secretary General of the Lebanese National Commission for UNESCO from October 1990 to 2023, she vigorously pursued UNESCO's mission of promoting peace, human rights, and sustainable development through education, science, and culture. She held roles as a designated National Coordinator for various UNESCO programs and as an elected representative in international committees and alliances across diverse domains.

As a visiting advisor, she lectured for four years at the Lebanese University - Faculty of Information - Master's classes on UNESCO programs in the fields of culture, media, and communication.

She actively participated in numerous conferences, seminars, forums, and workshops organized by UNESCO and other global entities, significantly contributing to advancing cooperation and understanding on a global scale.